Brain, Bones and Nerves:

Just as the human body needs all three systems-the brain, bone and nerves-functioning in perfect harmony to maximise longevity and performance, a business needs its strategy (brain), architecture (bones) and culture (nerves) functioning in harmony to maximise results. By controlling and shaping the three most important pillars of sustainable business growth, this session shows how senior leadership teams can assess their own effectiveness in leading growth and use proven tools and frameworks to take corrective action. As an enterprise leader, you should focus on these three as your most important focus areas- everything else must be delegated.

About the Speaker:
